Student Services: The University supports equal access to services regardless of disability. Any student with a disability needing academic adjustments or accommodations should speak with the professor as early as possible. Students with disabilities should also contact: Sharon House, Coordinator of Accommodative Services at 267-3267, Sisson 112, or e-mail her at housesese@potdam.edu for further assistance. All disclosures will remain confidential.

Evaluation: A 15-20 page research paper is required. The format, deadline for submission and grade breakdown are attached. Your final grade is 20% class attendance and participation and 80% paper.

Grade Breakdown:

92-100=4.0	74-76=2.3
88-91=3.7	71-73=2.0
84-87=3.3	68-70=1.7
80-83=3.0	64-67=1.3
77-79=2.7	60-63=1.0
	<60=0

Requirements:

- 1) The research paper is our formal source of evaluation. Deadlines are non-negotiable.
- 2) Class attendance is mandatory. I follow the attendance policy described in the college catalog. For this class, you will be asked to drop the course after three unexcused absences.
- 3) Class preparation and participation are required and mandatory. It is the only way I know that the course objectives can be met.
- 4) ANTH 150 Human Sexuality - prerequisite.

ANT Major/GEP: This course meets the 400-Level course requirement for the major. It fills the GEN ED mode SA and is an upper division elective.

Potsdam Honor Code: "On My Honor: I will not give nor receive any inappropriate assistance on any academic work in accordance with the SUNY Potsdam Academic Honor Code and the directions given to me by each course instructor."

Objectives: The anthropological perspectives of holism and relativism are the foundation of this course. AIDS, a global health problem, affects the species at all levels of our being. We are going to examine AIDS medically, biologically, culturally, economically, politically, and behaviorally. We will apply these perspectives to specific groups as relevant. We will be doing anthropology.

The agenda for this course is to reach a cognitive understanding of AIDS which is internalized so that our attitudes and behaviors can be used to keep ourselves and others healthy and safe. This class will be conducted as a seminar. This means that assigned readings are done so that class discussion of the readings can be held. You are expected to come to class prepared to discuss, question, and apply the readings. The topics are a guide and we will proceed through them at the group's pace. Confidentiality and trust are integral parts of the course. I will do what I can to create a safe, trusting environment in which each of us and the group can explore this phenomenon. It is highly likely that we will not complete all the topics on the syllabus. Adjustments will be made as necessary and class input will be sought.

As much as possible, I will try to bring in guest lecturers who have specific expertise in various fields of AIDS work. You may be required to attend an AIDS-related event outside of class. If so, it will be counted as a class and I will cancel a class.
